

Amy Hornback

Amy currently serves as the Secretary to the Mississippi Transportation Commission, and has been in that position since 2005. In this capacity, she keeps all of the minutes of the bi-monthly Commission meetings as well as pertinent records; acts as liaison between the Commission and the Mississippi Department of Transportation; and represents the Commission as needed. She started with MDOT in 2000 in the Public Affairs division. At that time, she oversaw the public relations aspect of the division and was responsible for disseminating information both internally and externally; as well as serving as agency spokesperson.

Amy attended the University of Mississippi and is a 1995 graduate of Mississippi College with a B.S. in Communication. Amy is also a graduate of the Mississippi Certified Public Manager program and the Stennis Institute for Government. She is currently a member of the inaugural class of the Women Initiatives Network for Republicans (WIN-R).

Amy lives in Madison with her husband, John Bret, and their son, John Parker and daughter, Avery. They attend St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church in Madison.
